Dear NASPA Colleagues and Friends:

On behalf of the NASPA Board of Directors, the NASPA staff, and the 2013 Planning Committee, we extend a warm welcome to sunny Orlando and to the 95th NASPA Annual Conference. We are delighted you have joined us for this time of reflection and consideration of how we might boldly move beyond what we thought was possible as student affairs professionals.

Orlando serves as the perfect backdrop for our conference theme, Bold Without Boundaries. It is a city of imagination and limitless opportunities, a place where dreams become reality. People come to Orlando from all over the world to be inspired and to view the world creatively. Our NASPA conference will do the same. It will challenge you to expand your learning and explore the possibilities, without boundaries, as we prepare for changes in our profession.

We have an amazing conference waiting for you. The speakers and presenters we have assembled are a wonderfully diverse mix of professionals who will educate us on topics ranging from digital storytelling to social justice. They will inspire us with their stories and also help us find our own poetic voice. In honor of the 50 year anniversary of the landmark "I Have a Dream" speech, we have assembled a distinguished panel of thoughtful leaders who will reflect on the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and his bold dream for a better world. Be part of this conversation about our profession's enduring legacy of education for social justice and how we can continue to transform higher education through change efforts.

Our time together in Orlando is an opportunity to prepare for current and future challenges. Strive to go to as many sessions as possible. With more than 500 programs, this conference has something for everyone. Be sure to check out the "Random Spaces of Coolness." These designated areas include a Social Media Hub, a Schwag Swap, our community service project with Clean the World, and an Educational Reflection corner.

Most important, take time to reconnect with long distance colleagues and make new friends. Talk, reflect, think, imagine, and envision. We want you to boldly return home with a renewed sense of purpose and a call for action—to have the courage to inspire others on your campus and in your communities.

GENDER PRONOUN STICKERS

As an association that recognizes and appreciates diversity in relation to, and across the intersections of, race, color, national origin, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, veteran status, age, socioeconomic status, and disability, NASPA strives to create an inclusive environment at professional development events for all attendees.

It is important to offer opportunities for all attendees, including trans* and gender non-conforming participants to share their gender pronouns in settings where they are asked to introduce themselves. These stickers allow for everyone to specifically indicate their pronouns so that each individual will feel safe at this conference. This effort is designed to reduce the discomfort that one may experience should one NASPA member reference another with an inaccurate pronoun. We encourage everyone to wear one!

The annual conference unites us in a celebration of learning, forged in enduring relationships among colleagues committed to higher education. What better way to enjoy a final night in Orlando than in the joyful spirited company of NASPA friends? This year, NASPA welcomes the ever-popular Orlando nightclub act, Howl At The Moon, to entertain us as only a rollicking dueling piano (with full band) high-energy group can do! From pop to Motown, country to classics, show tunes to diva standards, and power arena rock to sing-along anthems, these multitalented players can handle any request you throw at them: no genre boundaries here! So come join the NASPA pack and be your own closing party DJ by telling the live band what to perform. Requests taken and expected, #howlando13!

Improving the Quality of Learning in College: The Next Great Opportunity for Student Affairs

Monday, March 18, 8:30 a.m. – 9:45 a.m.

Marriott, Crystal Ballroom (G-H)

Richard P. Keeling, Keeling & Associates, LLC

Higher education is being held back by the quality and quantity of learning in college. This is a true educational emergency! Many college graduates cannot think critically, write effectively, solve problems, understand complex issues, or meet employers' expectations. We are "losing our minds" — and endangering our social, economic, and scientific leadership. Critics say higher education costs too much and should be more efficient. But the real problem is value, not cost; financial "solutions" and "completion" alone will not be enough. The critical solution—making learning the highest priority in college—demands fundamental and innovative change. Student affairs must be a core partner in the emerging national discussion of improving student outcomes and in creating sustainable culture change on every campus; this is our most important opportunity for true professional and institutional leadership.

Negotiating with Hurricanes: A System Response to Student Crisis

Monday, March 18, 3:00 p.m. – 4:15 p.m.

This featured educational session will highlight the challenges and responses associated with Hurricane Sandy and its impact on the largest urban public university in America. The presenter will discuss how the City University of New York (CUNY), serving over 270,000 degree seeking students, coordinated communication and services to its student-body, including 68,000 students living in low water-lying zip codes, 7700 students living in the mandatory evacuation zone and 1000 students displaced from housing. The presenter will examine key distinctions between system and institutional responsibilities and share the continuing work with affected students. Lessons learned and areas of improvement will be discussed.

Purposeful Sharing

and Joshua Alvarez, Colorado State University

This is an important and relevant opportunity for colleagues to share values, beliefs, and ideals in-person, at a microphone, for up to five minutes during a Featured Educational Session at the NASPA Annual Conference in Orlando. Imagine listening to about 10 colleagues – each with their own story, place in history, and perspective eloquently and creatively sharing in an uninterrupted manner what they believe about something important to them and, probably in some way, important to you.

Career Wellbeing: The New Measure of a College Degree

Tuesday, March 19, 3:30 p.m. – 4:45 p.m.

Marriott, Crystal Ballroom (G-H)

Brandon Busteed, Gallup Education

Amidst a time of great upheaval in higher education, we have lost our way by aiming at the wrong outcomes. Today, we persevere over outcomes such as grades, graduation, and gainful employment. But these measures are woefully inadequate when it comes to proving the value of a college education. At best, they should be considered intermediate outcomes – flags to knock over on the way to a much more important and ultimate outcome: career and life wellbeing. Few of us would disagree with this vision, yet how do we quantify and measure such things? Decades of Gallup research measuring workplace engagement and wellbeing across the world sheds incredible light on where higher education should head. If we set our sights on the more profound outcome of career and life wellbeing for our students and graduates, everything changes. In the future, a degree won't matter if it fails to achieve career wellbeing.

Participants will join senior and mid-level professionals in a critical analysis of best practices, collaborative partnerships, challenges, and the future of student affairs work at HBCUs. Transportation will depart at 7:00 a.m. from the Marriott, Convention Entrance

Matthew Wawrzynski, Michigan State University

Amy Bergerson, University of Utah

Bridget Kelly, Loyola University of Chicago

Jay Larson, Michigan State University

JoNes VanHecke, Gustavus Adolphus College (MN)

Writing for professional publications is an important and useful skill for student affairs practitioners and faculty members. The presenters of this intensive writing workshop will introduce authors new to professional writing to the processes of writing, submission, and publication in professional journals. A major workshop goal will be to demystify the publication process and help participants gain confidence in their potential to publish. Participants will experience three-on-one coaching on a piece of writing brought with them to the workshop.

PC4 An Innovative Vision for Student and Staff Multicultural Education

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (3)

Rhondie Voorhees, The University of Montana

Steve Petkas, University of Maryland

This workshop is designed to stimulate critical reflection on multicultural education for students and staff. What, exactly, should we be trying to achieve and what are some strategies we can use? A new conceptual framework for multicultural education will be presented in this session that will provide a comprehensive structure for participants to consider principles, strategies, and learning outcomes. Particular attention will be given to strategies that are process-oriented, inclusive, and create 'capacities' for successful engagement.

PC5 Case Management in Higher Education:
Overview of an Emerging Field

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (4)

Keith Robinder, Iowa State University

Ashley Blamey, University of Tennessee

Laurel Donnelly-Banks, Wake Forest University

JJ Larson, University of South Florida

Sarah Solomon, Syracuse University

Case management is an emerging specialization in student affairs that requires interdisciplinary knowledge of best practices in student development, social work, mental health response, and threat assessment. The presenters, who are experienced practitioners from the new Higher Education Case Managers Association (HECMA), will provide participants an opportunity to connect with colleagues and receive comprehensive, hands-on training and resources from experts representing a variety of institutional types and case management philosophies.

HALF-DAY PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS

9:00 A.M. – 12:00 P.M.

PC6 Reframing Dialogue: Conflict, Coalition, and Leadership

Marriott, Crystal Ballroom (B)

Aaron W. Voyles, Appalachian State University

Henan Joof, Glendale Community College

Andre Manukyan, University of Massachusetts Amherst

Cathy Roberts-Cooper, Appalachian State University

Our students now confront diverse issues, such as globalization, sustainability, and social justice. A new approach is required to address these issues so that we can learn, adapt, and thrive in complex and changing environments. Though introducing the idea of dialoguing may seem simplistic, engaging in new conversations is the only way to push ourselves past the boundaries created by the boxes of our jobs, our roles, and even our own ideals. The presenters will focus on practical applications of non-traditional group communication, including Open Space Technology and Bohmian Dialogue, in an effort to address bold new challenges.

PC8 Designing an Intentional Resident Advisor (RA) Training Schedule and Curriculum

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (11)

Dean Kennedy, University of Houston

Romando Nash, University of Southern California

Research on fall RA training over the past several decades has revealed that curricula and schedules experience limited changes from year to year. This session will provide time for training designers to be guided through the process of creating data-driven, innovative, intentional, and meaningful training curricula. Participants will develop a schedule and curriculum focused on relationship building and content sharing between peers and direct supervisors, and will draft specific learning outcomes to assess training curricula and the transfer of learned skills.

PC9 Restorative Justice Practices in Student Conduct Administration

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (12)

David Karp, Skidmore College

Justine Darling, University of San Diego

Molly Pierson, Washington University

Restorative justice is a collaborative decision-making process that includes victims, offenders, and others seeking to hold offenders accountable by having them (a) accept and acknowledge responsibility for their offenses, (b) repair the harm they caused to victims and communities, and (c) work to reduce the risk of reoffense by building positive social ties to the community. In this workshop, the presenters will introduce restorative justice as a response to student misconduct. Using role plays and case studies, they will demonstrate restorative justice principles, various campus restorative practices, research findings, and how restorative justice supports student development. The session will conclude with a review findings from the STARR Project (Student Accountability and Restorative Research Project), which provides evidence of strong student learning outcomes.

PC10 Integrative Learning and Reflective Practice in Student Affairs

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (13)

Taryn Petryk, The University of Michigan

Simone Himbeault Taylor, The University of Michigan

Dave Waterhouse, The University of Michigan

In this practice-based session, the presenters will guide attendees through a framework for integrative learning and reflective practices, and discuss the pivotal role of student affairs in advancing this work. The use of Generative Listening and Portfolio Pedagogy, will be showcased as two techniques used to give students an outlet for reflection. Participants will gain an understanding of how to capitalize on daily interactions with students to connect and synthesize the learning that is occurring in multiple areas of their lives.

PC11 Creating Environments for First Generation Student Success

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (9)

Lee Ward, James Madison University

First-generation students comprise about one-third of college students today. While these students are starting to attract the attention of educators and researchers, they often remain an invisible yet important minority on our campuses. In this working session, designed to highlight recent scholarship and best practices, the presenter will introduce practical models and engage participants in the process of creating knowledge that can be shared and applied in any institutional setting. As they engage this important topic, participants will consider the story of first-generation students as an issue of student learning and success, an issue of enrollment and financial expediency, and as an issue of social justice.

What lies at the root of behavioral concerns?

Many factors impact choices that students make: addiction, pressure to conform, social injustices, and unhealthy environments, among others.

Conduct offices have an opportunity to examine student behavior and offer bold, innovative programs and services that get at the heart of the behavior. In this highly interactive half-day session, participants will discuss holistic approaches to engaging students, participate in action planning, and leave with tangible resources to apply to their conduct programs.

PC15 Learning Outcomes & Assessment Strategies for PractitionersMarriott, Grand Ballroom (10)Joann Prosser, *University of MarylandAnn Becks, *University of MarylandJay Garvey, University of Maryland

As practitioners are called upon to demonstrate program outcomes, developing an assessment strategy can be daunting. In the first part of this workshop, the presenters will review strategies to develop manageable assessment practices, leverage existing information, and incorporate both direct and indirect assessment methods (i.e., using more than surveys). Participants will then choose a general assessment or learning outcomes track to apply this knowledge to their own programs. Participants are encouraged to bring specific program information and attend as a team.

PC16 What You Do Matters: Activating Leaders to Combat Hate on CampusMarriott, Grand Ballroom (11)JoAnna Wasserman, *U.S. Holocaust Memorial MuseumChelsea Bracci, *College of William & MaryMary Giardina, *The Ohio State UniversityTim Kaiser, *U.S. Holocaust Memorial MuseumMargit Meissner, *U.S. Holocaust Memorial MuseumLeslie Morrow, *University of Illinois at Urbana-ChampaignJacob Wilson, George Washington University

Recognizing the impact of youth as change agents throughout history, the U.S. Holocaust Museum created a leadership summit to tackle challenges facing campuses today: hate, propaganda, indifference, and flagging civic engagement. The summit empowers leaders to find allies and build coalitions for action through exposure to powerful personal stories, inspiring role models, and practical tools. In this session, museum educators, summit participants, and partners from NASPA, will share strategies to bring this model for dialogue and leadership development to your campus.

Based on an innovative program developed at a predominantly White institution, the presenters will help participants explore the possibilities and strategies for implementing a sustained professional development program for building multicultural competency across an entire organization (e.g., a student affairs division). The presenters will examine the following specific workshop topics: assessing readiness, securing resources, navigating organizational politics, goal and curriculum development, measuring outcomes, and logistical considerations.

PC18 What's Our Role? An Integrated Approach to Student Affairs Planning

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (13)

Don Mills, Texas Christian University

Tom Hier, KSQ Architects

Is student affairs headed toward a major crisis? In a future stressed for resources and scrutinized for relevancy, student affairs organizations need creativity, an integrated approach and a future orientation to engage the student. This holistic approach is based on fundamentals of the profession combined with future-directed student affairs efforts. In this session, participants will work in small group charette formats to discuss case studies, consider campus cultures, create assessment approaches and participate in creative exercises to stimulate ideas for the campus of tomorrow.

PC19 You Want to Know What? Using Data to Answer Difficult Questions

Marriott, Grand Ballroom (14)

Darlena Jones, EBI MAP-Works, LLC

Has your supervisor ever asked you to answer questions like 'which students are at risk for dropping out?' or 'which unit needs improvement?' Questions like these can be frustrating because they are overwhelming and intimidating. In this session, participants will learn how to break those large ambiguous questions down into components and reframe them into assessment questions, locate or generate the data needed, and package that information into useful reports to support data-driven decision-making.

PC20 Training Skills to Decrease Stress and Enhance Creative Thinking

Marriott, Crystal Ballroom (B)

Marilee Bresciani, San Diego State University

In this interactive pre-conference workshop, the presenter will guide participants through modules excerpted from the Integrative Education Training Model (IETM) that draws upon attention, emotion, and cognitive training regulation theories, as well as incorporating self-authorship design. Participants will have the opportunity to identify naturally occurring reflection processes within their everyday life, as well as create an individualized plan to promote healthy and creative living.

Branding has become a fascinating phenomenon in the 21st century. Within the last decade we have witnessed the importance of branding for Fortune 500 companies, organizations and universities throughout the world. In this millennium, developing one's brand appears essential to secure a successful career path for professional African American women. Despite higher education's best efforts to significantly increase the representation of ethnically diverse populations, an insignificant number of African American women have ascended to the leadership pinnacle of academia. The Summit will provide a forum for participants to learn from highly skilled and established senior administrators on how they can begin to nourish the necessary skills in developing their personal brand to increase the possibility of their own success. We believe the Summit creates the unique opportunity to deposit substantial knowledge and critical information in developing and advancing entry and midlevel career African American women on the path to senior leadership. The summit will allow participants the opportunity to explore the dynamics of being a black woman and how these dynamics can guide one's career path and the privilege to optimize "Brand You" by unlocking one's full potential.

The Latina/os in Higher Education Institute focuses on contemporary Latina/o leadership theories and models, highlights Latina/o identity development in the context of leadership development, and explores the higher education leadership professionalization process for Latina/os. As a primary foundation for building the student affairs Latina/o community, this preconference offers a support network to aspiring Latina/o higher education leaders through interactive discussions about culturally relevant leadership issues, creation of a leadership development personal action plan, and contemplation of the major challenges when converting Latina/o leadership aspirations to attainment of higher education leadership positions. The preconference also features the Cathy Acevedo Comadre Circle and the Compadre Circle where a number of experienced higher education administrators and senior student affairs officers will share their knowledge, experience, and stories of Latina/o leadership development.

PC28a Collaborating Across Divisions to Meet Graduate Student NeedsMarriott, Grand Ballroom (11)Katherine Hall-Hertel, *University of North Carolina-CharlottePenny Rue, *University of California-San DiegoChristine Wilson, UCLA

Graduate student needs differ significantly from those of traditionally-aged undergraduates. In this pre-conference workshop, the presenters - which include a SSAO from a large research university and a senior administrator from a graduate division - will explore the ways in which successful collaborations are built across campus. Participants will learn how to build coalitions to meet the needs of graduate students and how to address and overcome the multitude of challenges that arise when building these coalitions. The afternoon sessions will include sharing of information and best practices related to collaborating across divisions, and allow participants to select a round table conversation that best addresses their most pressing concerns.

HALF-DAY PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS

9:00 A.M. – 12:00 P.M.

PC29 Redefining Student Affairs: A Fundamental DifferenceMarriott, Grand Ballroom (12)Robert Page, *Metropolitan Community CollegePatrick Day, *University of Massachusetts-BostonStephanie Gordon, *NASPAEllen Heffernan, *The Spelman & Johnson GroupKevin Kruger, NASPA

As campuses continue to adjust to changes in the landscape of higher education and the press to demonstrate the true value of a college education, student affairs organizations face increased expectations regarding their value-added contributions to access, achievement, assessment, and completion. Student affairs leaders must continue to redefine and evaluate their practices related to how they contribute to student enrollment, development and financial management, diversity and inclusion, and institutional initiatives that support academic success and degree completion. This symposium, in conjunction with NASPA's James E. Scott Academy and SJG-The Spelman & Johnson Group, will facilitate a discussion among senior student affairs professionals on how to enhance the relevance of student affairs to the higher education enterprise.

PC30 Bridging Transition Boundaries in Indigenous Student DevelopmentMarriott, Crystal Ballroom (E)Jamie Singson, *University of Illinois at Urbana-ChampaignStephanie Waterman, University of Rochester

For an indigenous student's ability of 'bold' educational achievement, it is necessary for an awareness development in understanding the types of complex 'boundaries' which impact academic achievement and success. In this workshop, the presenters will explore the ways in which 'boundaries' become significant for understanding student transitions into Eurocentric post-secondary models of education. Strategies for helping the student maintain, or invigorate, grounded and traditional knowledge ways while traversing 'boundaries' into post-secondary institutions will also be discussed.

PC31 The Engaged Campus Initiative: How Engaged is Your Campus?Marriott, Grand Ballroom (13)Maggie Stevens, *Indiana Campus CompactJuan Franco, *University of Nebraska Lincoln-Nebraska Campus CompactDean McGovern, *Montana Campus CompactDeeDee Rasmussen, Florida Campus Compact

An engaged campus is one that is consciously committed to reinvigorating the democratic spirit and community engagement in all aspects of its campus life: students, faculty, staff and the institution itself (Campus Compact Engaged Campus Toolkit). Building on the Campus Compact Indicators of Engagement, the presenters will explore what an engaged campus is in the context of a today's colleges and universities, provide tools for measuring institutional engagement, and help participants develop a plan for creating a culture of engagement on their own campus.

PC32 Writing and Designing a Survey to Assess Your Program or ServiceMarriott, Crystal Ballroom (D)Emily Slager, *The Ohio State UniversityD'Arcy Oaks, The Ohio State University

The presenters will work closely with attendees in a true 'workshop' format to help them write and design an excellent survey or other assessment tool that they have in mind to assess their program or service. Attendees should come to the workshop with a project in mind and ready to apply what they learn. They will be given an abundance of tools to take with them for current and future assessments. This workshop is excellent for those who are given the task of assessment but need some practical tools in their toolbox.

PC33 Serving Non-Traditional Students: A Best Practices TrainingMarriott, Grand Ballroom (14)Susan Warfield, *University of Minnesota - Twin CitiesElise Buggs, *Eastern Michigan UniversitySusan Estep, *Eastern Michigan UniversityErika Gamboa, *University of ArkansasAlice Jordan, *University of California-BerkeleySusan Stiers, *University of ArkansasKristina Testa-Buzee, Norwalk Community College

This interactive workshop will feature a multi-institutional panel of pioneers in the field of non-traditional student work, who will speak to best practices that have been identified in working with groups such as students with children, adult learners, and veteran students. Five institutions will be represented, from long-standing to newly formed programs, and will present their unique approach to this work. Ideas for implementing best practices and funding sources for creating similar programs on other campuses will be identified and discussed.

HALF-DAY PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS

1:00 P.M. – 4:00 P.M.

PC34 Student Affairs ReimaginedMarriott, Grand Ballroom (12)Diane Anderson, *Western Michigan UniversityMary Jo Sekelsky, *University of Michigan - FlintLes Cook, *Michigan Technological UniversityDenise Maybank, *Michigan State UniversityKen Peress, Lake Superior State University

Michigan Chief Student Affairs Officers represent the fifteen public institutions in the state of Michigan; collectively, they have over 450 years of experience in higher education. They meet without fail twice each year to engage in analyzing legislation, problem solving, sharing best practices, and serving as sounding boards for one another. When the group met for their retreat in May 2012, they immersed themselves in discussion focusing on three topics: (1) Innovation & Change; (2) Appreciating the Generational Divide: Baby Boomers, Gen X'ers, and Millennials; and (3) Talent Development and Succession Planning. At the conclusion of their retreat, these Senior Student Affairs Officers were eager to share their insights, discoveries, and 'Aha!' moments. Utilizing data, current literature, personal anecdotes, and Paul Gauguin's masterpiece, Where Do We Come From? What Are We? Where Are We Going?, the presenters will take participants on a journey through our profession. Presenters will use an appreciative inquiry model to frame the session, encouraging discussion, reflection, inquiry, visioning, and innovative thinking.

PC35 AVP Development: Understanding and Navigating the Unique RoleMarriott, Crystal Ballroom (D)Amy Hecht, *Auburn UniversityMark Gumble, *University of Central FloridaCarla Jones, *Kansas State UniversityCharles Klink, *Virginia Commonwealth UniversityDebra Merchant, *University of CincinnatiGreg Naylor, *University of the ArtsHeather Rakoczy Russell, University of Notre Dame

Assistant/Associate Vice Presidents (AVPs) hold a unique leadership role, which requires them to both represent the vision of the Vice President and establish themselves as bold leaders. Many professionals are attracted to the AVP position, but often do not understand its full purpose and responsibilities. In this interactive session, the presenters will explore topics pertinent to current AVPs, including networking, navigating politics, and management versus leadership.

PC36 Developing the Core Components of Veteran Friendly CampusesMarriott, Grand Ballroom (13)David Vacchi, *University of Massachusetts-AmherstAynsley Diamond, *Board of Regents for Higher EducationJohn Mikelson, University of Iowa

Does your programming for student veterans make sense? Are you considering developing programming for student veterans? During this interactive session, participants will have an opportunity to discuss their programs with experts who have implemented successful programs within the context of a new conceptual framework that may shape the way we serve student veterans in the future. Those considering starting programming for student veterans will be able to glean best practices and also ask questions of experts in a developmental environment.

PC37 Direct Measures of Student Learning: A How-To GuideMarriott, Grand Ballroom (14)Michael Christakis, *University at Albany-State University of New YorkWhitney Brown, *University at Albany-State University of New YorkNancy Lauricella, University at Albany-State University of New York

We know that not all learning occurs in the classroom, but how do we assess student learning outside of the classroom? The University at Albany's systemic approach to developing specific, measurable learning outcomes and identifying direct methods for their evaluation has resulted in evidence of student learning outside of the classroom. This pre-conference session, sponsored by the Student Affairs Assessment, Evaluation and Research Knowledge Community, will help participants identify and measure, through direct methods, student learning. Qualitative data analysis and the use of rubrics will be highlighted.

PC38 10 Technology Tools to Use TodayMarriott, Crystal Ballroom (E)Jennifer Sparrow, *Virginia TechMichele Yovanovich, Florida Gulf Coast University

During this workshop, the presenters will highlight and show real-world applications of 10 technology tools. A Stixy website will be available to provide participants with a back-channel collaboration and curation tool to utilize throughout the workshop. This workshop will include tools for engaging students: Stixy, Spicy Nodes, Thinklink; enabling access to information: Tweetdeck, Flickr; and personal productivity: Dropbox, Evernote. Emerging tools will be included as they evolve. An extensive list of additional tools will also be provided.

FEATURED SESSION

8:30 a.m. – 9:45 a.m.

014 Improving the Quality of Learning in College: The Next Great Opportunity for Student Affairs

Marriott, Crystal Ballroom (G-H)

Richard P. Keeling, Keeling & Associates, LLC

Higher education is being held back by the quality and quantity of learning in college. This is a true educational emergency! Many college graduates cannot think critically, write effectively, solve problems, understand complex issues, or meet employers' expectations. We are "losing our minds"—and endangering our social, economic, and scientific leadership. Critics say higher education costs too much and should be more efficient. But the real problem is value, not cost; financial "solutions" and "completion" alone will not be enough. The critical solution—making learning the highest priority in college—demands fundamental and innovative change. Student Affairs must be a core partner in the emerging national discussion of improving student outcomes and in creating sustainable culture change on every campus; this is our most important opportunity for true professional and institutional leadership.

438 Career Wellbeing: The New Measure of a College Degree

Marriott, Crystal Ballroom (G-H)

Brandon Busteed, Gallup Education

Amidst a time of great upheaval in higher education, we have lost our way by aiming at the wrong outcomes. Today, we persevere over outcomes such as grades, graduation, and gainful employment. But these measures are woefully inadequate when it comes to proving the value of a college education. At best, they should be considered intermediate outcomes – flags to knock over on the way to a much more important and ultimate outcome: career and life wellbeing. Few of us would disagree with this vision, yet how do we quantify and measure such things? Decades of Gallup research measuring workplace engagement and wellbeing across the world sheds incredible light on where higher education should head. If we aim at the more profound outcome of career and life wellbeing for our students and graduates, everything changes. In the future, a degree won't matter if it fails to achieve career wellbeing.
